AI, ML and deep learning will reinvent core insurance processes and systems: Nilesh Parmar, COO & CTO, Future Generali India Life Insurance

Nilesh Parmar | June 15, 2023

Q. How has the tech-driven disruption increased the insurance penetration and opened up multiple distribution channels for the insurers?

The increasing rate of internet and smartphones penetration in India has led to significant technology disruption that in turn has provided insurers with the opportunity to reach out to the mass population directly. In addition to this huge B2C opportunity, the ability to provide personalised solutions has benefitted the entire insurance value chain, thus delivering increased customer value and meeting their ever-changing needs at a faster pace.

We believe that the introduction of 5G internet services and the proliferation of IoT-based technological applications will act as further drivers for innovation and will have a wider impact across the insurance industry. Consent-based data sharing will help augment India Health stack by facilitating increased trust between the insured and insurers, while the increasing use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Machine Learning (ML) will unlock further efficiencies by reinventing core insurance processes and systems.

Moreover, with more insurers shifting from traditional systems to distributed cloud-based infrastructure, we should see the entire insurance ecosystem becoming more flexible and attuned to customer expectations. This technology-driven disruption will make insurance more accessible to India's diverse population, thereby helping insurers penetrate new markets and categories at a rapidly increasing pace.

Investing in life insurance

ALOK RUNGTA

Why it is pertinent to make smart financial decisions: With more

Indians falling in into debt traps early on in their lives, the financial health of India's burgeoning working-age population lies in a delicate balance. Rapidly increasing standards of living and easy access to high-interest credit products are further exaggerating this problem, with the potential to snowball into a larger banking crisis in the longer term. While the first step in addressing this problem is for affected individuals to acknowledge their financial situation, many of them lack the propensity to understand different financial terms. Having a basic level knowledge of budgeting, investing and a repertoire of other such financial skills is the need of the hour and comes under the umbrella term of financial literacy. Financially literate individuals are better able to compare long-term costs of big purchases, make wise saving or investing decisions and plan effectively for retirement. Yet, only 27% on Indian adults qualify above the minimum level of financial literacy as defined by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI), despite much higher general literacy rates across the country. Bridging this gap through financial literacy outreach programs, is therefore necessary to realise the vision of a financially inclusive India.

Understanding the importance of financial security: Apart from taking the right decisions when it comes to saving or investing money, it is equally or more important to purchase products that provide the necessary financial protection. This is especially true for individuals who are servicing large amounts of debt and are more susceptible to pass on this liability to their dependents in the event of their early demise. Even for young couples and those with young children, it is necessary to secure their future with financial products that can provide a lump sum benefit or regular payouts to assist in meeting future expenses. Whether it be planning for your child's higher education, marriage or even for one's own retirement, it is therefore recommended to supplement investments with adequate financial protection. Longevity is a boom, but it comes at a cost and these new age phenomena also needs to be well understood and planned for.

The right age to start financial planning

While it is often suggested to start early when it comes to financial planning, it is best to start as soon as one starts earning, to avoid making costly mistakes that could jeopardise one's financial future. Moreover, inculcating healthy saving and investing habits in your 20s can provide the right momentum to the goal of becoming financially secure, before additional responsibilities like looking after your children and aging parents which contribute to an additional financial burden. In scenarios where there is only one earning member in a family, this becomes even more important since the entire family's future depends on just one individual.

Irrespective of your age or financial situation, the sooner one starts planning for the future for the better, even if income or savings are at a marginal level above expenses. By investing in the right instruments early on in life, there is more time available for the invested capital to appreciate. As a result, not only can savings be augmented with the power of compounding, but an individual can fulfil more aspirations by making large purchases much earlier in life.

Financial products that can secure your future

Fortunately, there are plenty of options available in India today for those wanting to start their financial planning journey and building safeguards against the vagaries of life. Starting a recurring deposit or investing lump sum amounts in fixed deposits are basic steps that one can take. However, it is important to complement debt savings with a mix of equity instruments like mutual funds or even directly investing in government-backed bonds, to beat the inflation rate and ensure that your capital doesn't erode in value over time. Additionally, purchasing separate insurance covers to protect against different types of financial risks, life & health uncertainty is highly recommended. While Term Insurance Plans are most preferred in India, there are several other life insurance products available today that can help in prudent financial planning.

Unit Linked Insurance Plans (ULIPS) provides life cover along with the potential to generate wealth by making systematic investments in market-linked products, while Endowment Plans are suitable for those who wish to receive guaranteed returns on policy maturity without worrying about market volatility. Child Insurance Plans on the other hand are most beneficial for parents who want to build a corpus for their children's future, with the added security of a built-in life cover for the parents. Finally, Retirement Insurance Plans are coveted for their ability to help the insured gain financial independence during the retirement stage, offering better returns than debt instruments since money is invested in a mix of debt and equity products. Health covers are critical and important as they help manage the financial burden of the unknown, given the lifestyle nowadays.

The role of life insurance in safeguarding your family

Post COVID-19, more Indians have been cutting down on discretionary spending and are instead allocating capital towards products that offer financial protection in times of need. Products that offer insurance benefits while also helping you build a corpus for specific requirements can prove to be the best financial decisions that one can make for their loved ones. Towards this end, Child Insurance Plans and Retirement Insurance Plans are suggested for parents who need to plan for their children's future, while also ensuring that they plan for their own retirement. Unit Linked Insurance Plans (ULIPS) provides life cover along with the potential to generate wealth by making systematic investments in market-linked products, while Endowment Plans are suitable for those who wish to receive guaranteed returns on policy maturity without worrying about market volatility. In comparison, Term Life Insurance plans are cheaper and are equally important to cover against mortality risks. While the nudging of Inflation forecast is indeed marginally positive for the markets, the upside risks to Inflation characterized by MPC, continue to exemplify wait and watch and cautious stance of RBI and reflect the probability of an extended pause by RBI. While RBI refrained from giving cues on future course of policy pivot, it continues to reemphasize the goldilocks domestic macros, which give some elbow room to remain dovish and eventually change the policy stance towards the end of the year."

In the pursuit of empowering consumers with knowledge, Future Generali India Life Insurance conducted a study that delved deeper into the perceptions and preferences surrounding life insurance. Released on National Insurance Awareness Day, the study takes a closer look at the obstacles faced by individuals when navigating the life insurance landscape, particularly highlighting the dissatisfaction among Gen-Z policyholders with the lack of transparency, trust, and commitment exhibited by insurers.

Speaking on the study, Bruce de Broize, MD and CEO, Future Generali India Insurance, elaborated, "For a country that is pegged to become the third largest economy by 2027-28, improving life insurance penetration can act as an important driver for overall economic development. To bring India on par with the global average, addressing the top barriers preventing the country's citizens from securing themselves with life insurance is pertinent."
